▶ Hartzog Conger Cason & Neville establishes endowment to support internship

A gift of $115,000 from the Oklahoma City-based law firm Hartzog Conger Cason & Neville established an endowment fund to benefit OU Law students interning at the U.S. Department of State, Office of the Assistant Legal Adviser for International Claims and Investment Disputes in Washington, D.C.

In the fall of 2012, the OU College of Law and the State Department created an exclusive OU Law internship allowing one student from OU to intern full time with the State Department every fall, spring and summer.

"We are honored and excited to provide funding that allows OU Law students to participate in the prestigious State Department internship program," said John D. Robertson, managing partner at Hartzog Conger Cason & Neville. "The establishment of this internship provides a great opportunity for OU College of Law students at the federal government level and introduces them to the inner workings of Capitol Hill and the United States Department of State."

"The U.S. State Department internship is truly special, providing OU Law students a unique opportunity to work on international law matters on behalf of the United States government," said Dean Joe Harroz. "There are only a few law schools in the country that have such a program. This generous gift from Hartzog Conger Cason & Neville continues their partnership with the law school and helps expand opportunities for our students. We are grateful to the firm."

In addition to this new donation, Hartzog Conger Cason & Neville contributes to the OU College of Law by sponsoring the Hartzog Conger Cason & Neville Scholarship, participating in OU Law's fall and spring recruitment programs, hiring OU Law interns and new associates, and hosting a networking event for first-year law students every year.

▶ Book signing benefits Opala scholarship fund

Author Bob Burke (seated) autographs a copy of his book, Opala: In Faithful Service to the Law, during a reception held January 30 in the Sneed Lounge. Proceeds from the event were donated by the publisher, Oklahoma Heritage Foundation, to the Justice Marian P. Opala Scholarship Fund, which was established in honor of the late Oklahoma Supreme Court Justice to benefit OU Law students. Also attending were Professor Lindsay Robertson, Dean Emeritus Andy Coats ('63) and Allen Harris, chairman of the scholarship fund committee.

► Fellowship funding doubles with two new programs

OU Law doubled its funding that supports students working in public interest fellowship positions with the addition of two new fellowships, the Justice John Paul Stevens Public Interest Fellowship and the GableGotwals Public Service Fellowship.

The Justice John Paul Stevens Public Interest Fellowship provides $10,000 annually, with two students receiving $5,000 each summer. The GableGotwals Public Service Fellowship awards $2,000 to one student annually.

The John Paul Stevens Public Interest Fellowship Foundation, which funds the fellowship program, was established by Justice Stevens’s former law clerks to honor and extend the retired U.S. Supreme Court justice’s legacy of public service. One of his former clerks is OU Law Professor Joseph Thai, who is co-sponsoring the OU Law fellowship with his wife, Theresa Thai.

“Part of what makes law a noble profession is that we not only represent paying clients, but we also serve the public as guardians of the rule of law for those who cannot afford to pay,” Thai said. “Students often enter law school with lofty ideals, and we hope to encourage a career of public service by supporting fellowships that enable students to engage in public interest work while in school.”

Other OU Law fellowships include the David L. Boren and Molly Shi Boren Public Interest Fellowships, the Marjorie P. Maute Memorial Public Service Fellowship, the Cindy Foley Memorial Fellowship, and the Coats Fellowship for Summer Public Service.

The number and amount of fellowships are determined on the basis of available funding in any given year. In 2012, OU Law awarded $12,500 in summer fellowships. In 2013, OU Law will award $25,000. All fellowships require students to complete 200 hours of work and submit a report to the sponsors at the end of the summer.

The GableGotwals Public Service Fellowship was awarded to Corie White (center). Pictured with her are Jake Krattiger ('11), an associate of GableGotwals, and Joseph Thai, who serves of counsel to the firm.
