Students attend Chinese Law Summer Program

Eight students participated in OU Law's first summer program in China along with OU Law Professor Mary Sue Backus. They lived in China for a month, attending classes on the Chinese legal system at Renmin University Law School and exploring the capital city of Beijing and the surrounding area.

The program is the longest-standing American law school study abroad program in China, having been administered by the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law for 15 years. Other groups also affiliated with the program were the University of Minnesota Law School, Boston College Law School and the University of Tennessee College of Law.
