THOMAS T. WRIGHT.

FEBRUARY 15, 1845.

Read, and laid upon the table.

Mr. VANCE, from the Committee of Claims, made the following

REPORT :

The Committee of Claims, to whom was referred the memorial of Thomas T. Wright, report :

The petitioner, on the 15th of August, 1840, lost the list of articles set forth in the schedule hereto annexed, and alleges that they were destroyed by the Seminole Indians in Florida, by fire. In proof of this allegation, and of the value of the property scheduled, certain affidavits are filed with the memorial.

Without entering into an analysis of the testimony submitted to sustain the claim, it is deemed sufficient to say, that, were it of the highest character, the committee would not feel warranted in recommending so wide a departure from the principles settled by the acts of 1816 and 1825, as would be the making provision for the payment of all property destroyed by civilized or savage enemies in different wars. It is not so much as claimed that this property was destroyed in consequence of its occupancy or use by the United States for any purpose whatever, or in consequence of any act of the United States; and therefore fails to come within any of the rules recognised by Congress, allowing indemnity for losses sustained by citizens at the hand of a public enemy.

The adoption of the following resolution is recommended :

Resolved, That the petitioner is not entitled to relief.
